I, Melissa Bradfield, am bringing this matter before the court regarding a dispute with the defendant arising from a failed business agreement.

In May 2025, the defendant and I agreed to register a company. A sum of $1,100 was paid by me through bank transfer to cover the company set-up cost, as the defendant outlined that ~~that~~ was the cost. I also sent the defendant a copy of my passport and police certificate. M. Bradfield

Subsequently, the defendant changed his mind about proceeding with the company registration. On July 18th, 2025, the defendant agreed to refund the $1,100 sum to my bank account. He requested that I send my bank account details to facilitate the refund, which I promptly did.

July 30th, 2025
In our last communication, the defendant stated that he cancelled the company registration and is awaiting a refund from the companies office in order to refund me. He further indicated that only when he receives the refund from the companies office, he will refund me, as he will not refund me out of his pocket.

As of today, August 21, 2025, I'm yet to receive the refund.

I'm therefore requesting that the court find in my favour that the defendant refunds me the $1,100, as well as $25 for a police certificate that the defendant stated was required for the company registration.
